A childhood in East Africa gave Emmy Award-winning cinematographer Bob Poole a fierce curiosity about the natural world as well as an adventurous spirit. Now, for a new, 6-part PBS/Nat Geo International series, Bob is drawing on that experience to document the rebirth of a lost Eden: Mozambique's Gorongosa National Park, a jewel of Africa's parks system until civil war almost destroyed it. There, he joined forces with rangers and scientists (including his sister, renowned elephant researcher Joyce Poole), on perhaps the biggest conservation project on the planet. He'll share secrets of filming lions, crocs, elephants, and spectacular scenery, and tell how he cracked the "Gorongosa code" - learning to read the landscape and find prime locations for filming the park's spectacular wildlife.

The acclaimed cinematographer extensive credit list includes documentaries for PBS NATURE and NOVA, BBC, over 30 films for Discovery Networks, and an additional 30 plus films for National Geographic Television. Bob Poole's passion for wildlife led to his involvement as a Board Member for the Gorongosa National Park Restoration Project. Currently he is working in Africa as the Presenter and Director of Photography on a 5-part series on the restoration of Mozambique's Gorongosa National Park for PBS and National Geographic International.
